Origins of the Omega /Psi /Phi Ritual

Founding Vision: A New Tradition for a New Era

Omega Psi Phi was established on November 17, 1911, at Howard University by nine visionary students: Edgar C. Eckhard, John R. H. B. /J. /R. /B., William J. /B. /R., William B. /R., William /C. /R., William /J. /R., William /C. /R., William /M. /R., William H. R. Their mission was to create an organization that would promote academic excellence, moral integrity, and community service among African American men.

Central to their vision was the belief that a well structured ritual could forge a lifelong bond of brotherhood. The founders drew inspiration from Greek-letter societies, African American traditions, and the philosophical teachings of the time. The result was a ceremony that blended symbolism, personal reflection, and collective commitment—a ritual that would become the heart of Omega /Psi /Phi.

Early Ceremonial Practices

In the fraternity's early years, the initiation ceremony was conducted in a modest dormitory room on campus. The ritual included the recitation of the fraternity's motto, "The Oath, The Creed, The Covenant," and the presentation of the Omega Psi Phi flag to new members. While simple, these practices set the foundation for a structured, symbolic experience that would grow in complexity and depth over the decades.
